

Nautilus

Our client owns and manages a portfolio of holiday properties in North Devon. They were keen to develop a consistent look across all of the properties without the result seeming too standardized. A key element of the brief was to design a scheme which would appeal to as many guests as possible and be practical as well as great to look at. Nautilus is a newly built duplex apartment on the North Devon coast.

Our scheme is based around the materials used by the architect in the design of the complex, specifically copper. The accent colour of the oxidised copper blue/green teamed with the white walls and the natural warmth of the wood provides a simple and contemporary interior befitting the style of the building.
